

What is responsive web design?

The developers of the responsive web applications take into consideration the needs of the users and the device compatibilities. Ideally, the design of responsive web applications should be suitable for a pleasant experience and should be adaptable for user device needs.

Recently, technologies that are used by the majority consist of all different kinds of aspect ratios and sizes. So today, responsive design considers what the user's ergonomics would be when viewing a website.